

turbed freedom and repose, could withstand the barbarous ravages of so short-sighted a policy! North Bochuamaland, including its Zambesi borders, and the Ma-babe veldt—once a great hunting ground—and the Lake N'Gami regions, are now all but completely denuded of ivory. Passing yet further to the westward, across the Kalahari, which now shares the dearth of Bechuamaland, we reach the countries of the Namaquas and Damaras. Here the same miserable history has to be recorded. Since the time of the explorer Charles Andersson, between 1850 and 1860, when elephants were found in abundance in Southwest Africa, succeeding years have seen the professional hunters pursuing without mercy or cessation their work of slaughter; and elephants may now be found no further south than Ovampoland, where the native hatred of the white man has alone protected them. The ivory trade of South Africa, decayed in like ratio. In 1875 the value of ivory exported through Cape Colony was £20,402; in 1886 it was £2,150. In 1873, £17,199 worth of ivory was exported from Natal; in 1885 but £4,100 worth. Beyond these Austral-African regions, where ivory is now as scarce as it was but a few years since superabundant, the progress of extirpation goes on apace. Portuguese and Arab hunters have for years been hard at work, and each season sees the precious supply wax smaller. In the Kilimajaro regions in East Africa, and about Bengwelo and the other great central lakes, elephants are no doubt still very abundant, but each month rifles and hunters penetrate more deeply into the Dark Continent. Probably the Niger territories and the little-known interior of Western Africa will hold out longest of all. But when it is remembered that 1,300,000 pounds of ivory are yearly imported into England, for which supply it has been computed that 50,000 elephants are annually slain; when it is remembered that for the annual supply of the whole world 100,000 elephants must yearly suffer death, no sane person can resist the conclusion that the days of the African elephant are now "but as grass," and that his place will soon "know him no more."

PSYCHICAL RESEARCH.

How Sir John Franklin's Fate Was Revealed by a Spirit Child.

A fair case for investigation by the Society for Psychical Research is presented in a little book recently published in England, which professes to give the true story of the discovery of the fate of the great Arctic explorer, Sir John Franklin. The author of the book is Rev. J. Henry Skewes, vicar of Holy Trinity Church, Liverpool. According to this writer, Sir John Franklin's fate was the subject of a special revelation.

Readers of Arctic history are well aware that the British Government sent many search expeditions to find traces of Franklin, but without avail. According to Rev. Mr. Skewes, a child of four years, the daughter of a Captain Coppin, of Londonderry, died in May, 1849, and for many months afterward reappeared in the spirit form to various members of her family. The Franklin mystery was being discussed everywhere at this time, and a seven-year-old sister of the dead child, at the suggestion of her aunt, questioned the apparition on the subject.

Thereupon, says this little book, "there appeared upon the floor a complete Arctic sea, showing two ships surrounded with ice and almost covered with snow, including a channel that led to the ships." This scene, or chart, was copied and, in answer to further questions, there appeared upon the opposite wall in large, round letters the following: "Erebus and Terror, Sir John Franklin, Lancaster Sound, Prince Regent, Inlet, Point Victory, Victoria Channel."

Captain Coppin is said to have forwarded this very definite message from the unseen world to Lady Franklin, who was so impressed with it that she insisted that Captain McClintock, who sailed on the final search expedition in 1857, should follow the exact route thus laid down. This was done, and the result was the discovery of the cairn at Point Victory, in which a thin tin cylinder was concealed, giving the only written report that was ever found respecting the loss of the Erebus and Terror and the death of Sir John Franklin.

McClintock returned to England and was loaded with rewards and honors for having cleared up the mystery, but his success, according to Rev. Mr. Skewes, was entirely due to the fidelity with which he stuck to the route laid down by the Londonderry apparition. Captain Coppin's children are still living, and Mr. Skewes says that, though it happened forty years ago, the story can be verified in every particular.

The Psychical Society should lose no time in holding its inquest on this remarkable narrative.

A Typographical Error.

Talking of typographical errors, the Burlington (Vt.) Free Press does not remember seeing a more horrible specimen of this class of blunders than one which appeared in a Massachusetts paper not long ago. At the close of an extended and highly eulogistic notice of a deceased lawyer the reporter wished to say that "the body was taken to Hull for interment, where repose the remains of other members of the family." By mistake a letter "e" was substituted for the "u" in Hull, changing the sense of the sentence to such a degree that no extra copies of that issue of the paper were ordered by the family of the dead lawyer.

Stopped Her Growth.

There is rather a peculiar case at the New Haven orphan asylum. This is a colored girl of eighteen years. In infancy she was abused by her parents and was finally thrown into a snow bank one night. She was found and taken to the asylum, and, though nearly dead, was so carefully treated that she lived. But the brutal treatment checked her growth, and she is now no larger than a child of seven years.
